George Clack, a spokesperson for the Howard County chapter of the Indivisible Working Group on immigration, will offer an interactive session, with the opportunity to ask any questions you may have. The one-hour event will focus on such issues as:

- What we mean by the term “sanctuary” and how frequently this concept has been misunderstood;
- How the Trump administration has changed previous U.S. government policies on undocumented immigrants and refugees;
- What CB-9, the sanctuary bill passed by the Howard County Council but vetoed by the County Executive, would have done for immigrants;
- The fate of the Maryland Trust Act in the state legislature;
- The reasons why voters will continue to see this type of legislation in the future.

Clack, who currently teaches literature and film at Johns Hopkins, is a former head of the U.S. State Department’s Publications Office. Indivisible Howard County MD is a non-partisan, grassroots organization made up of citizens concerned about Trump administration's agenda.

After the presentation, enjoy a box lunch to continue the discussion with Osher friends and guests. Lunch will include a sandwich, potato salad, chips, and a cookie. Beverages will be provided.
