Seeing History Through Artists’ Eyes: The Middle Ages
In this course, we’ll explore six transformational moments in medieval history through the lens of art and architecture. What happened to ancient Roman civilization when, in the 4th century, the Empire adopted Christianity as the official state religion? How did the barbarian invasions of Europe, and the Muslim caliphate in Spain, upend Mediterranean political and religious institutions? What role did Irish monks and monasteries play in the preservation and dissemination of knowledge and learning during what used to be called The Dark Ages? What circumstances led French kings and bishops to develop the technological and intellectual innovations embodied in the Gothic cathedral? How did the Italian city-states in the 14th century re-imagine their place in Europe?

Judy Scott Feldman, PhD, has been teaching topics in art and architectural history for over 40 years, including at American University, the Smithsonian Associates Program, and Oasis and Osher. As a founder and Chair of the nonprofit National Mall Coalition, she is actively involved in ongoing debates about how we tell our American story in memorials and museums on the Mall.

Mondays, March 30 - May 4 (6 weeks) 1pm - 3pm
The American Civil War: 1861-1865
We seem to have an endless curiosity about our Civil War. Countless volumes, biographies, documents, and films have been produced about this journey across “Five Aprils”. The war has divided the country in many ways over the last 150 plus years and become a modern historical battleground of interpretations. This six weeks course will sample but a small part of the entire war and its aftermath. Focus will be on the Eastern Theater, with its major conflicts and leaders. A special part will be an in-depth look at Maryland in the war and its special role as a border state. Also as the first large war of the industrial age, the role of new technologies will be explored.

Robert Hines, MA, received an MA from Johns Hopkins University and has taught in Maryland Public Schools for the past 50 years. He just retired from teaching in the International Baccalaureate Program at Richard Montgomery High School for the past 31 years, with a focus on European and Russian History. Bob has also worked as adjunct professor for Johns Hopkins graduate school of education. His post-graduate studies have been in the History of the Holocaust at Yad Vashem in Jerusalem, and for the past 33 summers he has taught a 45-hour course in the History of Germany and the Holocaust. In his spare time, he works with local volunteers at archaeology field schools.
